THIS IS THE PLACE FOR HOME MAKERS

Daly City was exceedingly fortunate in the character of its first residents. All were workers and were regularly employed—many of them were skilled workers whose diligence and the regularity of whose habits were reflected in the type of community which developed under their hands. They realized the need for systematic government, sanitary regulation and full educational advantages for their children. As each emergency arose they wasted no time in dealing with it, and were successful in furnishing the necessary facilities for the proper conduct of a well-ordered community. There were no capitalists among them, but there were no loafers. They were progressive in thought and prompt in action, and to the very limit of their means they supplied their community with the advantages necessary to its continued success. Schoolhouses were built, fire protection was provided, and the best minds in the city were commandeered for the public service.

Daly City presents a remarkable and almost unique story in the matter of tact and judgment in the selection of city officials. During the twenty-one years of its corporate life, Daly City has succeeded in keeping a clean slate in municipal affairs. It need hardly be mentioned that this fact has had much to do with the success of the city.

One of the main contributing reasons for the continued prosperity of Daly City is the union of commercial and civic leaders for the common good. Our municipal representatives have been selected from the progressives among our own business men, who have worked harmoniously with our merchants. Daly City business men have not attempted to work independently, but have been organized for many years with the purpose of strengthening business and improving conditions generally. The efforts of the merchants, always supported by the City Councilmen, have been marked by a singular progressiveness, and every opportunity has been seized to advertise to the world the achievements and advantages of this community.

It is well known that no movement, municipality or government can achieve success without real unity. Too often the time of public officials is wasted in removing obstacles and overcoming objections. The ideal situation exists where all branches of public service are able to forget minor differences and unite harmoniously to promote the general welfare. This fortunate condition is found in our midst, and a happy understanding is maintained between the representatives of the people at the City Hall, the members of the Fire Department, of the Merchants' Association, of the School Boards, and the various progressive patriotic, fraternal and other organizations. With such a combination, it is not surprising that Daly City is progressive and prosperous.

It has been observed above that some cities merely happen to come into being—that is to say, a grouping of homes takes place without any definite scheme or plan, and with the passing of the years the settlement assumes proportions not foreseen by its pioneers. A city MAY just happen, but continued and invariable civic success is not a matter of chance. When your city has arrived and is functioning in all its departments, there must be plan and determination, and there must be brains to make your city successful. When we congratulate ourselves upon the condition of affairs around us, we can not forget that our city leaders have been thinking and working, that they have been gathering up and applying the shrewdness and foresight and energy of the people—to use them in the march of progress and prosperity. The great result is achieved by a combination of effort in which the most modest voter on the register plays his part.

For many years Daly City has been known throughout the west as a good place to live. These simple words possess a remarkable advertising value. From year to year new residents are moving in, new homes are being built, new faces are seen in our churches, in our lodges, at our various public functions. The appeal which reached the first arrivals of twenty-six years ago has never failed, and every month adds to the number of those who come to survey the situation and conclude that "this is the place."

We have established a reputation and we are maintaining it. We have good reason to be proud and satisfied when we recall the achievements of the past. We remember gratefully the contribution which has been made by the men who have unselfishly served their city. There has been a grand procession of such faithful public servants. Some of them have answered the last call, some no longer sit in our councils, but many are still active in our local affairs. Councilmen Arthur J. Bodien and Henry Sundermann have taken a glorious part in the great work which has brought Daly City to the position it now enjoys. Both have grown up with the city and are familiar with all branches of its activity. Both fit perfectly into the great scheme which is being developed so successfully under the able leadership and direction of Mayor H. H. Smith. Their work is not yet completed, and the city still needs their energy and ability. Their continuance in office will not only reflect credit upon two faithful officials, but will also strengthen and encourage our present administration in its excellent work for the people of Daly City.

COUNCIL MEETING MONDAY EVENING

At the meeting of the City Council last Monday evening, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding, a communication was received from the California Veterans Welfare Board, enclosing a petition for cancellation of certain taxes appearing on the tax records as a lien against the property owned by this board in Daly City, and the request was referred to the city attorney.

The report of the board of fire commissioners on fires and fire alarms during the month of December showed the usual record of no fires of any consequence in Daly City.

The monthly report of the health officer was received and filed.

A communication from the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, asking permission to excavate on Hillcrest drive to improve the service was received and the request was granted.

A communication was received from Station No. 6, Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, in the newly annexed territory, offering the city a Dodge-Graham fire truck, one of the trucks formerly used by the Colma Fire Department. This was referred to the Fire Commissioners.

The fire committee reported on standardizing of all water hydrants, in compliance with National Underwriters' request, and to have the work done within a period of five years. This work as reported was done within the last six months with our own city organization and at a very low cost.

The committee recommends that anyone with standpipes, sprinklers, or storage water tanks, should adopt the new national standard in order that the fire department can act with full efficiency.

Mr. R. S. McMillan, representing the Central Mission Improvement Club, addressed the Council, extending an invitation to the Council to participate in the ceremony at the opening of Van Ness avenue into Howard street, on January 31.

TO TAKE PART IN TREE PLANTING EXERCISES

In response to the nation-wide request for the planting of trees in honor of the birth of George Washington, two hundred years ago, the Balboa Ward L. D. S. Relief Society will co-operate with Daly City officials and plant a tree on the grounds of the Daly City pump-house, located at Citrus and Niantic avenue. The planting will be done at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, January 30.

There will be a short program, and all Daly City residents are cordially invited to attend. There will be community singing of "America," and "America the Beautiful." Mr. E. L. Williams, a member of the Polytechnic high school, will deliver an address on the significance of tree planting. Councilman A. J. Bodien will also be a speaker. Mrs. Agnes Felsch, president of the Relief Society, will address the group, her subject being "Appreciation."

The dedicatory ceremony will be held on Washington's birthday. The exact time will be announced later.

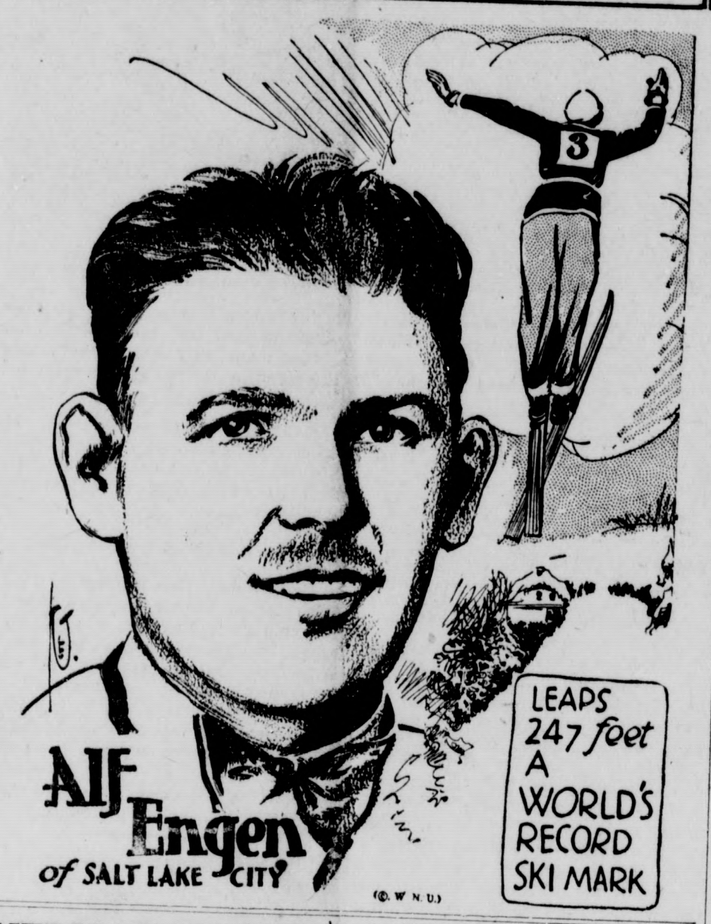
ENTERTAINS MEMBERS OF WOODROW SEWING CLUB

The sewing club of the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande Parent-Teachers' Association met at the home of Mrs. Grace Hill on last Friday afternoon. The club is working on a number of pieces to donate to the City Welfaro Board. Those present were Mrs. M. Hanselman, Mrs. E. Page, Mrs. A. Nelson, Mrs. Haskins, Mrs. G. Talmadge, Mrs. E. Harmon, Mrs. G. Hill.

On February 5 the executive board will meet at the home of Mrs. Eva Page and make final arrangements for a dance to be given in the near future. Watch for the date.

The President, Mrs. M. Woodside, attended the district presidents' meeting last Friday in San Mateo. Many important matters of the state and national associations were discussed. The affair was well attended.

TOPNOTCHERS by KET



AMERICAN LEGION PARTY A SUCCESS

The dance given last Friday night by Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, was a most enjoyable party. The music was fine and the refreshments were plentiful. The musicians and the kitchen committee deserve a word of praise and thanks, for, members, while you are enjoying yourselves, they are working. The only complaint heard was that the evening passed all too fast.

Commander Jack Mockler attended the meeting of the Eighth District, held at Redwood City last Monday night, where many important matters were discussed.

The next meeting of the San Mateo Council of the American Legion will be held on Friday evening, February 5, the place of meeting to be announced later. All Legionaires are welcome to these important meetings, where many subjects are brought up and discussed.

On Wednesday evening, February 10, Daly City Post No. 410 will participate in the public installation of officers to be held by the Menlo Post, No. 422, of the American Legion. Our Post colors will be taken along, and it is hoped that Daly City Post will make a good showing down there, and give the baby Post of San Mateo county a good send off. Menlo Post No. 422 promises us a good time.

On Thursday evening, January 28, many members of the Post and the Auxiliary attended the whist party given by the South San Francisco Legion Post. All had a good time, for that Post knows how.

Last but not least, mark down in your calendar Friday evening, February 5. Our own Auxiliary is giving a whist party that night. In all our undertakings they are with us 100 per cent. Let's help them, too. The girls assure us of a good time.

Daly City Post No. 410 will hold its next meeting Friday, February 12, at Eagles Hall, at 8 P. M.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY

A group of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Felsch, of Risel street, last Friday night, to give Mr. Felsch a surprise party on his birthday. A very enjoyable evening was spent playing indoor games. At a late hour delicious refreshments were served. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Sadler, Mr. and Mrs. A. Hansen, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O. Story, of San Bruno, Mr. and Mrs. G. Blake, of South San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Evans, Mrs. L. Jacobsen, Mrs. Ella Lee, Miss D. Felsch, June and Georgie Felsch, and Harry Allen.

Well Baby Clinic Board Meeting

The members of the Well Baby Clinic board met at the home of Dr. Hildegarde Henderson, of Divisadero street, last Tuesday afternoon, where they were guests at a delightful tea. Mrs. Orvilla D. Pauw entertained the group with some well chosen vocal selections. The guests included Mrs. E. C. Boyle, Mrs. Julia V. Jordan, Mrs. Maynard Chesney, Mrs. Ethel Bolger, Mrs. E. Lohr, Mrs. Orvilla D. Pauw, Mrs. Eva Page and Mrs. Marjorie Woodside.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NOTES OF INTEREST

The primary grades of the Vista Grande school have been making rapid improvement in reading in the different rooms. Mr. Crane, the District Superintendent, has equipped each teacher with several sets of reading books and with library books for the children's silent reading table. These books inspire the child to read and encourages him in his work. In a very short time we hope to have a 100 per cent group of children in reading.

Friday afternoon the unlimited teams of Crocker and Jefferson schools met for the first time on a basketball court. Three of Crocker's Giants failed to appear for the game, but three players of the 100 pound team who were filled with school spirit stepped in to uphold the honor of Crocker, and gave Colma a tremendously hard fight. Against heavy odds and very little encouragement they played with determination and skill. The score at the end of the first quarter was 2 to 2, and at the half Colma led 5 to 2. At the end of the third period Crocker was in the lead 8 to 7, and the fourth period found both teams tied, 9 to 9. They were given five minutes to decide the final, with a result of 13 to 9 in favor of Colma. Colma gained the extra points by two field goals.

The lineup for the two teams were as follows:

Colma Yankees—C. Alexandro, Albert Agresti, Ricco Pellicci, Leo Tealdi, Leonard Graziani, Louis Caserza, John Gustavina, Orlando Martini, David Franzoia.

Crocker Giants—Jim Ragni, Bill Elder, Edward Owens, Kendal Van Pelt, Paul Shelmadine, Frank Curtis, John Dunn.

We can not overlook the value of these games to our boys and girls. They not only win games, but learn that when the odds are against them they must fight to win. They sometimes lose, but not without a fight. To take defeat cheerfully and uncomplainingly shows true sportsmanship.

DANCE AND BRIDGE WHIST BENEFIT FOR NEW SHRINE

A dance and bridge whist evening will be given at the Palace Hotel on Friday evening, February 5, for the benefit of the new St. Anne's Shrine, now under construction in the Sunset district. Rev. Wm. G. O'Mahony, pastor, is honorary chairman, Dr. Charles McCarthy is general chairman; Lieut. James Boland, chairman halls and music; Mrs. M. Lawler, advertising and publicity; Miss M. Simpson, tickets; Mr. James McNamara, decorations; Mr. Thos. Ryan, ushers; Miss Marie Wilson is secretary. The work is progressing rapidly, and this party is given so that all the friends of St. Anne's shrine may have the opportunity of assisting in its erection. The Concert room and the Gold ballroom of the Palace Hotel have been engaged for the occasion. And special entertainment will be furnished by a number of stars of the stage and screen.

HOMEWORK CAUSES MORE DISCUSSION

Someone signing himself "A Parent" has sent to the high school a letter clipped from a San Francisco afternoon paper in which a protest is made against homework for school children.

In this letter the question is asked: "Why do we permit our servants, the school teachers, to impose tasks on them (our children) too hard for them to bear?" And again: "How can they (our children) be expected to be anything but undernourished and nervous when they are obliged to devote from one to eight hours a night to homework? Not only do their bodies suffer, but they have no time to devote to getting acquainted with their parents."

Along with the clipping is enclosed a note saying that "A Parent" and many others in Daly City voice these sentiments.

Principal James Ferguson passed the letter and accompanying note around among members of the high school faculty for their information, and afterwards made the following statement: "The school teachers of San Francisco, against whom these complaints are made, and the teachers of every other place in California, are interested in the physical and mental and moral welfare of the children. If any of them are assigning too much homework it is an indication that they are seriously interested in the mental welfare of their pupils. The more homework a teacher assigns for the pupils to do, the more work she is assigning to herself in the form of supervision, reading and correcting papers, etc. The assigning of homework, therefore, would not be proof that the teacher is lazy, or indifferent towards the interests of her pupils. It is a strong indication to the contrary.

"Of course it is an exaggeration to say that school children spend throughout the school year eight hours in home work every school night, or even half that amount.

"There are unusual pupils in school who spend on an average from one to two hours a night on homework. These are the pupils who are naturally interested in doing well any task assigned to them, whether it be school work or any other task. They are the honor pupils in school, and in after life they form a very large percent of the successful men and women in the professions and in business.

"Take our own student body, for instance. School is dismissed at 3:15. The average age of the students is a little over sixteen years of age. Very many of them have no tasks to perform at home. Would it be better for them to have no school work to do from 3:15 in the afternon until next morning at 8:15? Perhaps it would. If so, the teachers wiil be glad to adopt such a program. But so far, we have never been able to get parents or educators or any other class of people to agree that it is best for adolescent boys and girls to have no assigned tasks after school, and to be perfectly free to exercise their minds and their bodies without any suggestion of adult guidance.

"I have never known a college student's parent to complain that his son or daughter was made to study too hard, or do too much homework while in high school; but I have known parents to complain that the high school course was too easy, that it did not require enough study, and as a result the students were not prepared for the advanced work in college.

"And we have all heard critics of our educational system claim that when boys and girls graduate from school and go into business offices they can neither read, write, spell nor figure.

"If giving no homework would remedy these defects in our educational system, the teachers will be very happy to adopt the plan.

"But I am wondering if 'A Parent' or the writer of the above letter thinks it would.

"The Jefferson Union high school, both trustees and faculty, is willing to adopt any plan that will better serve the interests of the boys and girls of our district. To this end," Mr. Ferguson says, "I shall be happy to have conferences with parents at any time."

GREATEST SERMON EVER PREACHED

Continuing a series of sermons on the Sermon on the Mount, which is the greatest sermon ever preached, the pastor of Grace Presbyterian church will discuss this wonderful sermon Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service. His text will be, Matthew 7:1, "Judge not that ye be not judged." For an offertory, Miss Mildred Roof will play an organ solo. In the evening service at 7:45, Rev. John W. Falconer will be the pulpit guest and will preach on "The Gospel, a message for today."

OLD GLORY POST HAS RADIO HOUR

Last Friday, January 22, Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, held a public meeting, devoting the entire evening to the V. F. W. "Hello America" hour, broadcast over the network of the National Broadcasting Company.

A total of 16,325 recruits were obligated by the Commander-in-Chief over the radio, the ceremony being followed by a very interesting program originating in various points throughout the east.

Mayor H. H. Smith of Daly City gave a very interesting talk on the progress of the community and pointed out the advantages to be gained through organization efforts. Councilman Henry Sundermann proved to be a booster for his city, accentuating his remarks by stating that he believed each and every organization within this district was a little better than those of other localities. Our very popular Councilman Arthur J. Bodien extended himself in the art of "mouth to ear" advertising, and praised the people of this community for the aid extended the Boy Scout movement in Daly City. He also remarked on the very efficient co-operation he has been receiving from members of this Post and other organizations of this city in sponsoring the Scout movement.

After an enjoyable "Radio program" the floor was cleared and dancing was enjoyed. Music was furnished by the Frank Lemos snappy Eagles' orchestra.

We want to express our sincere thanks to Mayor H. H. Smith, Councilmen Henry Sundermann and A. J. Bodien, who, by their presence at this function, helped us to put over our local program in a big way. We are very fortunate to have a mayor who is never too busy to render a service to those who need his aid.

We also desire to express our appreciation to the Byrnes Radio Shop, who so kindly loaned the Post the radio with which the program was so clearly received.

POLLY ANN SMART SHOPPE TO REOPEN TOMORROW

Residents of Daly City will be interested in the announcement that the Polly Ann Smart Shoppe, located in the Daly City Theatre building, will reopen tomorrow, Saturday, January 30. The Polly Ann Smart Shoppe will be under the capable management of Mrs. Robert Ross and Miss Alice B. Ross, who are well known in Daly City and vicinity, having resided here for a number of years.

It is announced that they will carry a complete line of wash dresses, silk frocks and knit goods and novelty berets. The Polly Ann Smart Shoppe, under the new management, should become a popular meeting place for the feminine residents of Daly City and vicinity.

BOARD BALKS AT HOSPITAL CLAIMS

The San Mateo county board of supervisors, at a special session last Monday, balked when claims from two private hospitals were submitted for ambulance service and treatment in highway accidents. This was the second series of claims from private hospitals for emergency treatments that the board has held up.

Supervisor Thompson told the board that he had gone over the claims with Dr. A. L. Offield, head of Community hospital, and that Dr. Offield had advised against the payment of the claims. Dr. Thompson said that physicians had complained to him that the county plan to have private hospitals treat accident victims is a discrimination in favor of those physicians operating the hospitals.

Dr. Thompson was not in favor of the plan originally and at that time pointed out the dangers of economic disaster. The claims presented Monday showed that one hospital made a charge of more than $60 for ambulance calls, $40 of which represented money claimed for calls that brought the ambulance out on useless runs.

The board delayed action on the matter until the next county claims day, February 8.

The purpose of the special meeting last Monday was to name a horticultural commission to fill the vacancy created by the death of A. W. Tate. The board, however, delayed the matter one week, when it was learned that the names of those who passed the recent state examination had not been made available. The board was informed that none of the San Mateo county candidates had passed the examination. Should this be the case, it will be necessary to select a commissioner from some of the outside applicants. Fourteen have applied for the post.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

San Fernando's second annual mission fiesta and pageant will take place May 20 and 21, officers of the organization decided recently.

Three hundred more men will be sent to State labor camps in the mountains as soon as roads become passable. State unemployment camp headquarters announced.

A resolution asking Vierling Kersey to reconsider his resignation as State school superintendent was passed by the State Curriculum Commission recently in Fresno, the Department of Education announced at Sacramento. Kersey said recently, he will leave the State post August 1 to become Long Beach city schools superintendent.

San Francisco was decided upon as the next convention city by the executive committee of the California Newspaper Publishers' Association, as the final act of the session recently held at San Bernardino. At the executive committee meeting the newly-elected president of the organization, Neil R. Murray of El Monte, accepted the gavel from the hands of the retiring president, H. R. Judah of Santa Cruz.

In the hope of reducing the losses of pullets on poultry farms of the state, Dean C. B. Hutchison of the University of California College of Agriculture has announced the appointment of a veterinarian, Dr. W. H. Busic, who will undertake studies of means of preventing these losses. The appointment is in response to the demand of poultrymen of California for a more careful study of the cause of losses and to determine ways of preventing them in their flocks.

The Railroad Commission has formally approved the plans for a union passenger depot at Los Angeles, as presented by Southern Pacific Company and Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad Company, and in the same order disapproved the plan presented by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company. The approved plan calls for a stub-end depot located in the Plaza area. Estimates of cost of the structure vary from $8,708,000 to $9,517,000.

In the interest of public health the State Department of Institutions will lend medical aid to more than 2200 nonresident itinerants working at emergency labor camps, according to Dr. J. M. Toner, head of the department. Plans have been made to assemble medical supplies at ten major State institutions for distribution to twenty scattered unemployment camps. Workers who suffer serious disability in districts near institutions will receive the care of physicians on institutional staffs.

To facilitate handling of police information requiring speedy action, a modern short-wave radio receiving set will shortly be installed in the private office of Chief of Police Maston of Porterville. He will then be in constant touch with radio stations in Los Angeles, Bakersfield, Tulare, Fresno, San Francisco and various valley cities with radio sending equipment. This addition to local police equipment is expected to be particularly helpful in apprehending automobile thieves and recovering stolen machines.

With the changes made in the design of the new 10,000-ton cruiser San Francisco, the vessel now on the ways at Mare Island Navy yard will be a miniature battle ship. To overcome the sharp roll of the Chicago class, heavy masses of armor will be used on the hull, and it is figured that the ship will carry 1000 tons more armor than the Chicago. To secure this additional armor for the hull rivets are to be eliminated and plates welded. The tripod masts are to be abandoned for the "house" type. The new ship will be equipped with eight instead of four 5-inch anti-craft guns. The main battery will consist of nine 8-inch guns.

The Shipside Refrigeration Committee, meeting at Sacramento recently, concluded by adopting a resolution George Sehlmeyer of Elk Grove, master of the State Grange, introduced, proposing establishment of State-owned pre-cooling plants at Stockton and Sacramento. "We believe that with the erection of two interior refrigeration plants at such points where cheap transportation can be had to the Bay Region, namely, Stockton and Sacramento, . . . and an assemblying terminal in the Bay Region, . . . present marketing conditions can be greatly improved and wider markets developed," read the resolution, adopted after several hours debating between farmers and shippers of perishable food products.

For the third successive time the Vallejo milk supply has been rated 97 per cent by the State Department of Agriculture.

Twenty State labor camps in thirteen California counties are providing food and shelter for 1457 indigent men, Governor Rolph said in a statement issued recently. The camps, he said, have a total capacity of 2196 men. The camps now functioning are in Fresno, Mariposa, Madera, Humboldt, Mendocino, Nevada, San Bernardino, San Diego, Los Angeles, Riverside, Tuolumne, Amador and Butte counties.

Permanent registration of voters in Los Angeles county now totals 293,459, according to Registrar of Voters Kerr.

It was a close race, but the stork cut-distanced deaths and marriages in California last year. State health department officials estimated 82,000 births in 1931; 68,000 deaths, and a score of 47,500 marriages for Dan Cupid. While the stork won in the vital statistics race, the 1931 birth record took a slump of nearly 400 babies over the previous year. Cupid's total was also 300 marriages "in the red."

Halted by the city of Napa on demand that a competent superintendent be employed, Contractor J. P. Brennan has resumed construction of the $85,000 city-state highway bridge there.

The Navy Department recently set a maximum on the number of civilians that may be employed at Mare Island Navy Yard, according to reports from Washington. The total of civilian employes is not to exceed 3,600, and the minimum was set at 3,000, Assistant Secretary Jahncke said in a communication to the yard commandant.

Appointment of Charles J. Carey, of Berkeley, a World War veteran and a prominent Alameda county attorney to the post of Associate Chief of the State Division of Markets, in charge of enforcement of the Marketing Act, has been announced by Dudley Moulton, director of the State Department of Agriculture. In announcing the appointment of Carey, Director Moulton pledged the unqualified support of the Department of Agriculture in serving California farmers and protecting them in the collection of the proceeds from the sale of their crops, and cautioned growers against filing claims against commission merchants with private collection agencies.

Six hundred army and navy planes, representing every type of government flying craft, including the navy air cruiser Akron, are scheduled to perform at San Diego in a mammoth air parade before pre-Olympic visitors to Southern California and a list of distinguished national figures, including the President of the United States, July 28, next, according to an announcement made by Howard Morin of the Chamber of Commerce of San Diego. The display will entail the second largest number of military planes ever concentrated in the air at one time and will be the largest combined army-navy display ever arranged, taking two and one-half hours to complete, according to the announcement.

During 1931, the tenth year of operation of veterans' welfare legislation in California, the State invested $15,035,734 in homes and farms for veterans, said George M. Stout, secretary of the veteran's welfare board. The board now has sixty-three students enrolled in schools and colleges, financed under terms of the Veterans' Dependents' Educational Act, which became effective last August. Funds now available will maintain these students until the end of the academic year in June, Stout said. A check of records in Washington showed there were 320 children of war veterans eligible for training under this law, of which 100 applied. It was expected forty more would reach the age to become eligible during 1932.

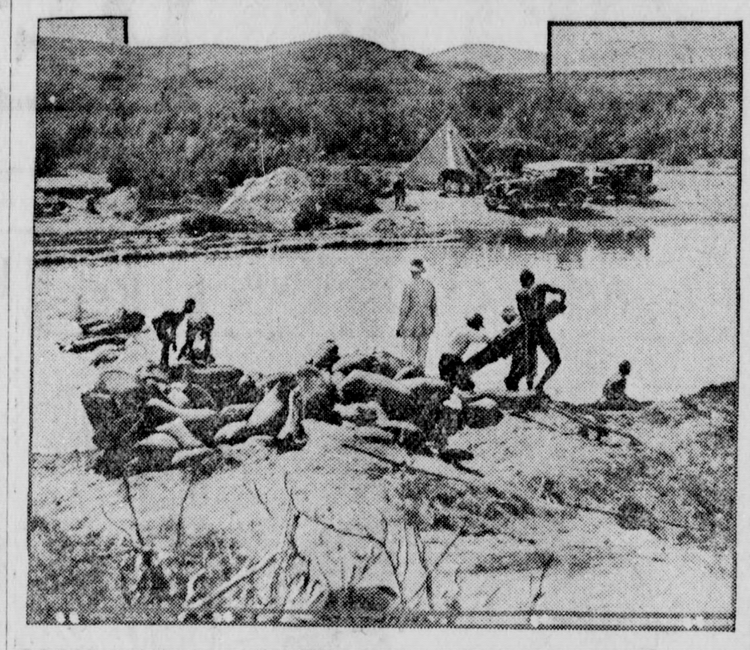
Everybody is talking of coming to California, according to Julian C. Hyer of Fort Worth, Texas, international president of the Lions Club, who came to Los Angeles to complete arrangements for the Lions convention to be conducted there from July 19 to July 22. "We believe our Los Angeles convention, the third international meeting in California, will be our greatest conclave," said Hyer. "We look for an attendance of between 8000 and 10,000 persons." Delegates are expected from Canada, Mexico, Cuba and China, besides from all parts of the United States. An international special train which will run from Canada to the Mexican border is expected to bring hundreds of foreign delegates. A motorcade of several hundred automobiles is expected to come from Texas.

The tourist and his vacation spending may play a highly important part in the economic life of a community. This is interestingly demonstrated in an exhaustive survey of 1931 tourist travel in northern and central California, recently completed by Californians, Inc. During the 1931 tourist season, a total of 1,251,746 persons visited California, coming here from 46 of the United States and from nearly all of the Canadian provinces. They spent an estimated total of $105,229,689 in the northern and central parts of California alone. The average length of each tourist's visit was found to be 23 days. The average individual expenditure of the so-called auto campers (about 15 per cent of the total) was $3.00 daily or $69.00 for the average 23-day visit; for the remaining 85 per cent of the tourists, average individual expenditure amounted to $7.75 a day, or $178.25 per visit.

J. V. Lloyd, assistant to the superintendent of Yosemite National Park, has been promoted to assistant superintendent of Grand National Park. Lloyd's departure ends fifteen years of service in Yosemite Park.

Fully 1500 men from the ranks of the unemployed in Los Angeles county are expected to be put to work soon. Excavating is to begin for Dam No. 2, which is to be built by the County Flood Control District eight miles up the West Fork of San Gabriel Canyon at a cost of $3,000,000.

Hunting Abandoned Turkish Gold



WAY back in September, 1918, the fleeing Turks were reported to have dumped boxes containing 115,000 pounds of gold into the river Jordan near Beisan. Search for the treasure is being made, and in the illustration divers are seen anchoring sand bags in the river to divert the current.

Bobby Laying Out "Perfect" Course

BOBBY JONES (left) with Wendell P. Miller, New York engineer, laying out a "perfect" golf course at Augusta, which is expected to be one of the most interesting courses in the world. The club, non-commercial and just for men, will not cater to the social side of the game. Most of the eighteen holes will be modeled after holes on famous courses where Bobby has played.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE WHITE HUNTER

ABOUT the time that Peter Rabbit had reached the Green Forest that night after the first snow, a slim, trim little fellow yawned, rubbed his eyes, yawned again, stretched, and then abruptly made up his mind that he was hungry, and that it was time to do some hunting. He scrambled up to the doorway of his home, which was in a snug hollow under the roots of an old tree in the Green Forest, and thrust his head out. The ground was white; the trees were white; everything was white. He smiled as he sat there looking out at the white world, and his smile was a crafty, cruel, hungry, smile. That white world just suited him. It couldn't have suited him better. If you had been there when he made his first leap out into the snow you would have understood right away why he was so well pleased. His coat was as white as the snow! He was all white except the tip of his tail, and that was black. It was Shadow the Weasel.

Now of all the hunters of the Green Forest there is none smarter, none more eager, none more tireless than Shadow the Weasel. Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote and Hooty the Owl hunt to fill their stomachs, and when they have their stomachs full they stop hunting. But Shadow hunts for the pure joy of hunting. When he has killed as much as he can eat he does not stop. Oh, my, no! He keeps right on hunting. He is like a great many two-legged hunters. It is for this that he is so feared and hated by the little people of the Green Forest.

Now as he bounded along in long leaps there was a fierce joy in his heart. With everything white he could be even bolder than usual, for in his pure white coat not even the wrathful eyes of Hooty the Owl, the one enemy he really feared, would be likely to see him. It was very convenient, that white coat. He ran swiftly with long bounds, stopping only to investigate the old logs and stumps and brush piles that he came to. Each of these he examined very carefully. There might be a Woodmouse hiding there, and Shadow is too good a hunter to be careless.

So presently he came to the tracks of Peter Rabbit. For just a second Shadow smelled of the tracks with his keen little nose, than which there is none keener. His eyes brightened with eagerness. "Ha!" said Shadow. "He passed here not very long ago. Nothing would or could suit me better for dinner than Peter Rabbit. This cold air makes me hungry. He doesn't know I'm about; unless Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote happens to give him a scare before I catch up with him it ought not to be a long chase."

It was well for Whitefoot the Woodmouse that Shadow had found Peter's tracks after they left Whitefoot's hiding place, instead of before. He is such a slim fellow that he could have and would have slipped in at the little doorway and made an end of Whitefoot. Presently Shadow came to the place where Peter had followed the tracks of Happy Jack Squirrel. "Hello!" exclaimed Shadow. "Has that fellow returned to the Green Forest? I'll just keep an eye open for him hereafter."

Then he paid no more attention to Happy Jack's tracks, but kept right on after Peter. Presently he came to the tracks of Jimmy Skunk. He knew right away whose tracks they were. You know Jimmy is a cousin to Shadow. When he saw those tracks he scowled. He and Jimmy are not on the best of terms. Besides, at first he thought Jimmy was following Peter, and that would upset his plans. But in a few minutes he saw that Peter had been following Jimmy and that made him easier in mind. He felt still better when Jimmy's tracks ended at the hole under the old stump where Jimmy had made his home for the winter. Shadow sniffed at the doorway and then showed all his sharp teeth in an ugly snarl. "He's down in there and I'm glad of that," he muttered, and then with longer bounds than ever he kept on after Peter.

Boston Men Pioneers

Those who sit indoors in comfort in the cold New England winters may thank two Boston men, James Jones Walworth and Joseph Mason, who back in 1844 went into business together and "agreed to risk their money in a scheme for installing a new heating device in business houses and residences." To this company belongs the early development of steam and hot water heating of buildings.

Slit Skirt Returns

Augusta Bernard, French designer who created this smart "restaurant" dress, says the slit skirt is coming back. The dress is of black satin and is fashioned in sophisticated style with an accompanying jacket showing huge cuffs of black fox fur.

LOW ROOFS

By DOUCLAS MALLOCH

IN CHILDHOOD to a little church
My footsteps found their way.
Life was not then the weary search
For joy it is today.
A simple sermon, simple song,
An understanding creed,
I found, when life was right or wrong,
Sufficient for my need.

Today before a greater shrine
Within a larger place
I seek again for words divine
To give me peace and grace.
But there is something missing now,
The fault the church or me,
I cannot tell—it seems, somehow,
That God is hard to see.
I think some day I'll search it out
(It's fifty years or more),
The church with lilacs all about,
An oak tree at the door.
For men and churches both may grow
Too great, too rich, too wise.
Perhaps when roofs and men are low
They're nearer to the skies.

Mother's Cook Book

HOT SANDWICHES

FOR A quick luncheon or supper there is nothing more satisfying than a tasty hot sandwich.

Ham and Egg Sandwich.

Take one cupful of chopped ham and two eggs. Put bacon fat into a frying pan, turn in the mixture and cook slowly until the eggs are set. Cut into squares, lay on toasted bread and spread with currant jelly.

Chickurry Sandwich.

Mix together one cupful each of chopped chicken and ham, one teaspoonful of curry powder, three-fourths of a cupful of thick white sauce and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Mix the ingredients. Toast six slices of bread on one side, spread the untoasted side with a generous layer of the curry and sprinkle thickly with buttered crumbs. Bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown. Serve at once.

Hot Roast Beef Sandwiches.

Lay slices of hot roast beef dipped into brown gravy between buttered slices of bread from which the crusts have been trimmed. Pour the brown gravy over all and serve very hot with pickles or olives.

Hot Oyster Sandwich.

Cut a pint of oysters into bits. To a tablespoonful of butter add one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne and the liquor and the oysters. Stir in one-half cupful of cracker crumbs. Fill buttered sandwiches and serve at once. This makes ten sandwiches.

"White Collar City" Planned for New York

IN THIS aerial view of lower New York the black line encloses the approximate area included in the elaborate plans of Fred F. French for raising a new "white collar city" that will ultimately house 10,000 people. About 14½ acres of ground are comprised in the sites which have been acquired, and the convenience to the Wall Street district makes it likely that the new "city" will be largely inhabited by workers in that region.

Capable of traveling on railroad tracks or on paved highways, a motor coach with flanged wheels set beside road wheels recently was placed in service in England.

COUNTY PROGRAM FOR AID OF NEEDY

San Mateo county last Tuesday took the first definite step since the national emergency for providing means of relief for residents of the county who have become unemployed and are now facing privation and acutal want. The county supervisors, at a general meeting in Redwood City, pledged county resources to back up the county committee on unemployment, which will begin immediately on a comprehensive program of relief.

Captain Edward J. Macauley, of Hillsborough, associated with President Hoover's national emergency committee, was named as executive director of the county relief program. He announced that he already had worked out a program which he believed would prove effective in dealing with county distress.

The director will immediately establish a county headquarters with a staff of volunteer workers to launch his relief program. He told the committee that some of his workers would necessarily be paid workers, but that the jobs would go to those now unemployed. Captain Macauley will work without any remuneration.

Speaking for the San Mateo county board of supervisors, Thomas L. Hickey, of South San Francisco, said that the board never yet had failed to meet any emergency that involved human distress, and that Captain Macauley and the county committee could depend upon the supervisors for whatever financial support was needed to bring immediate and effective relief. This sentiment was endorsed by Supervisors John W. Poole, of Redwood City, and Manuel Francis, of Half Moon Bay.

Reports from every section of San Mateo county were made at the meeting by various city managers and mayors, or their representatives. Unusually distressing conditions were reported from many sections of the county, and it was estimated that there were thousands of people now out of work and many of them in absolute poverty.

Captain Macauley said that his committee would, after the feeding and clothing of the needy had been taken care of, endeavor to prevent families from being evicted from their homes because of their inability to pay rent. He said, too, that efforts would be made to see that water, gas and electricity were not denied those unable to meet their obligations.

The director urged the county to make this purely a county affair. He urged everyone to trade at home and help stimulate business and create employment. He cited that money expended outside the county would do little to help bring relief and restore conditions here.

Every city and community in the county pledged to co-operated with Captain Macauley and his organization for co-ordinated relief.

AMERICAN LEGION PROMOTES SAFETY

The American Legion, with its eleven thousand Posts throughout the country, is aiding in the welfare activites of the nation. It has made safety one of its major activities. Not national safety, but individual safety in the home, in the school, and particularly on the highways and streets of our land. Recent estimates show that 100,000 persons were killed in the United States by all accidents in 1931, of which approximately 35,000 were victims of the automobile.

This new Legion activity has received the endorsement of all agencies devoted to accident prevention and safety education. Evidence of this is supplied by the fact that the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters in New York, in furtherance of its conservation campaign, has furnished the Legion with a comprehensive text book and guide. Under the title of "Community Safety Activities for American Legion Posts," the bureau has not only outlined what the Legion might do in attacking the serious problem, but suggests how it may be done.

Every phase of the subject is clearly and definitely covered. The situation in industry, the home, the school, and the street are explained with suggestions for programs looking to improvement. Principal emphasis is laid on street and highway accidents. Legionnaires are advised to get back of constructive legislation of all kinds, to co-operate with the authorities and other civic associations in working out definite, scientific traffic enforcement, to back the schools in safety education and to labor for improved conditions in homes. The Legion has undertaken a great work, and its efforts will make life a little safer for all of us.

Both parties will hold their national conventions in Chicago. Is that because of the Windy City's reputation or in spite of it?

GREAT JURIST RESIGNS

It is a source of genuine regret to his countrymen that Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court has been obliged to resign from the bench which he has adorned for nearly thirty years. He will be 91 years old on March 8, and in his letter of resignation he said: "The time has come when I must bow to the inevitable."

Justice Holmes was born in Boston, the son of the great poet and essayist whose name he bears. He entered the Union army after his graduation from Harvard in 1861 and attained the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. He was thrice wounded in action.

After the war he practiced law and became a professor in Harvard law school, later serving as Justice and Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court for more than twenty years, until his elevation to the United States Supreme Court in 1902. He has written much and has delivered many lectures on legal subjects.

In spite of his age, Justice Holmes' fine intellect is unimpaired, but physical infirmities have made it necessary for him to retire. Thus passes from the active stage a great man, a great jurist, and a great American. May he enjoy his well-earned rest in comfort and serenity.

THE USE OF BRAINS

Dr. E. E. Free, the eminent scientist, hands a rather hard jolt to certain professions which are popularly supposed to embrace a large share of the world's intelligence.

Among those who may be said to be intelligent at all, he places university professors, actors, doctors and preachers lowest in the scale. His reason for this conclusion, which he says is made as a result of scientific research, is that "their intelligence gets no exercise; they learn to confuse dogmatic plausibility with truth."

Going further, Dr. Free declares that the class of persons who use their brains to the best advantage are the foremen-mechanics, chief riggers, precision machinists and the like. Slghtly less able than these are engineers and technical men, closely followed by business men, all of whom are "required to get the facts before reaching conclusions."

The learned doctor doesn't say just where editors come in. Maybe it is well. Possibly they don't come in at all.

KILLINGS IN 1931

All of the twelve large cities showing the highest homicide rates for 1931 are in the South, Memphis holding the unenviable record of standing at the head of the list, as it has for several years. Omitting decimals, the number of killings per 100,000 of population for the year in these high ranking cities are as follows: Memphis, 58; Atlanta, 52; Lexington, Ky., 52; Birmingham, 49; Shreveport, La., 41; Augusta, Ga., 41; Nashville, 37; Miami, 36; Savannah, 36; Jacksonville, 34; Macon, Ga., 31.

In contrast with these figures, New York City had only seven murders per 100,000 of population, and the city of Chicago, in spite of its reputation, only a fraction over fourteen. Of the large cities, Boston had the most commendable record, with slightly less than two.

It is hard to account for the fact that Memphis consistently has a homicide rate twenty-five times as great as that of Boston, and more than eight times as great as that of New York City. But even Boston's rate is higher than that of England and Canada, and the murder record of the United States as a whole is the worst among the countries of the world.

LANIER ANNIVERSARY

The 90th anniversary of the birth of Sidney Lanier, one of the South's greatest poets, which falls on February 3, comes only a few days after the recent death in Greenwich, Conn., of his widow, Mary Day Lanier, at the age of 87. She had survived him more than 50 years, he having died in 1881.

Lanier was a most accomplished and versatile man, and was in turn a mechanic, soldier, teacher, professional musician, lawyer and poet during his 39 years of life, although a sufferer from tuberculosis contracted in his early twenties as a result of service in the Confederate Army, including five months as a prisoner.

After the war he held a clerkship in Montgomery, Ala.; was principal of an academy at Prattville, Ga.; studied and practiced law in Macon, Ga., his birthplace; spent a while in Texas for his health with little result; played first flute in the Peabody symphony concerts in Baltimore; composed music to his own songs; wrote the official cantata for the Centennial exposition in Philadelphia, and was finally a lecturer on English literature at Johns Hopkins University for a few months before his health completely failed.

Although not appreciated by critics at first, Lanier's poems have long been widely acclaimed, especially his "Corn," "Sunrise," "The Symphony," "Psalm of the West," "The Song of the Chattahoochee," "The Marches of Glynn," and the cantata already mentioned. He also wrote "Tiger Liles," a war novel, and "Science of English Verse."

His son, Henry Wysham Lanier, is a well known New York author and publisher, who was editor of the Golden Book magazine from 1925 to 1928.

WHAT CAN PAY FOR FIRES

Insurance will rebuild a destroyed factory, compensate for the burning of a stock of goods, and provide other indemnity, but nothing in the world can "pay" for a fire. We cannot secure competent compensation for loss of time, of business, of employment, for the industrial stagnation fire sometimes creates.

Nor can we measure human lives in dollars—and many thousands of these go to death via accidental cremation each year. Nor can anything compensate for a fire that absolutely brings to an end the development of a community—as a number of great conflagrations have done in the past and may be done again in the future.

Fire insurance is one of the corner-stones of our industrial civilization, but it can not pay for indirect costs of fire which are often far greater than the direct costs. The very stability of the great insurance industry has somewhat blinded most of us to these other vicious losses, until we lose sight of the fact that fire prevention is not primarily in the interest of the insurance companies (whose rates are mathematically based upon the law of average), but is rather in the direct interest of every one of us in minimizing these unseen losses.

To reduce the surplus it might also be well to plow under every third radio crooner.

Save Your Money

NOTICE

To the People of Daly City and Colma of a Big Reduction in Meat Prices this Friday and Saturday, at

Vogel Bros. Market

6386 Mission Street, Daly City

Three reasons why you can save from 20c to 30c on every dollar you spend in our market:

FIRST. We do business on a cash basis—No Charge Accounts—No Long Credits—No Losses. Our small profits bring us a big cash business and with the cash we buy much cheaper than others and we save every discount.

SECOND. Our long experience in business, combined with our large purchasing power for cash, and selling for cash, enables us to sell our high-grade meats for less.

THIRD. We make all our own Fancy Sugar Cured Hams, Bacon, Lard and Sausages, and thereby cut out the middleman's profit, which is also a big saving.

Following are only a few of our many Big Specials:

Tender Sugar Cured Corned Beef	10c lb.

IMPORTANCE OF ADVERTISING RECOGNIZED BY MERCHANTS

The importance of newspaper advertising to secure success in retailing during 1932 was discussed at the sessions of the Western Furniture Conference and Institute Market and ence. Furniture dealers from throughthe California Gas Appliance Conferout the west are attending the sessions in San Francisco which began on January 25 and will end on January 30.

"Properly used newspaper advertising will create new business for the retailer," asserts Theodore F. Baer, business manager of Western Furniture Retailing, who discussed problems with dealers at the various meetings. Mr. Baer is well known throughout the west as an account executive in the marketing division of Lord, Thomas & Logan, national advertising agency.

"The greater emphasis on newspaper advertising by both national and local concerns, is one of the most significant effects of the business depression on advertising. Newspaper lineage has withstood the curtailment in advertising appropriations to a greater degree than many other mediums, because organizations today demand direct returns from their expenditupres."

LEGS ARE OBSOLETE IN UNITED STATES FOR LOCOMOTION

Because the human leg has become obsolete for locomotion in the United States, there is definite hope for the automotive industry in 1932.

Such is the opinion of George M. Graham, vice-president in charge of sales of Rockne Motors Corporation, who addressed a group of mid-western Rockne dealers in Detroit on January 27.

"Knowing well the danger of prophecy, I nevertheless feel justified in voicing a note of hope for the automobile industry in 1932," said Mr. Graham. "This optimism is not based on statistics showing how many cars have so far disintegrated as to need replacement. It deals with something much more human.

"Automobiles will be sold in quantity in 1932 and thereafter for the simple reason that in the United States legs have become obsolete. Except for purposes of ornament, when attached to the gentler sex, and for the golfing use of mere man, the leg has become as useless as the appendix.

"No longer do the thigh, calf, ankle and foot discharge their original purpose of locomotion. 'This function has been delegated to the automobile.

"But for motor transportation, our people could not get around at all. They would be as definitely located on one spot as a bump on a log, or a pole-sitter. The business man would mope as lonesome in his office as if snow-bound. Visitors could not get to him. He could not go to his club or golf links.

"Theatres and night clubs would know him and his wife no more. Department stores and shops would grow cobwebs, with women patrons marooned at home. Gone for fair woman would be the pleasure of the matinee, or the grim battle of the bridge table.

"Children, unable to get to school, would sink to low depths of ignorance. Grass would grow on untrodden sidewalks.

"Of course, nothing like this will happen. People will always find a way to get money for the necessities of life. Of these essentials, transportation ranks only after food, shelter and clothing.

"The necessity of individual transportation for the business and pleasure activities of the American people explains why cars have continued to be used throughout the tough last two years. It explains the big consumption of tires, gasoline and oil. This is the best assurance of future business, but people are going to demand more for the money.

"The automobile industry has led all others in meeting this demand. More room, more beauty, better performance and more features which make for safety, convenience, comfort and luxury are being furnished for lower prices. Exhibits at the automobile shows prove this. The basic appeal of the new Rockne car is directed to this situation. Our striving is to bring quality into the lower priced field so that those who are forced to economize on their cars can do so without sacrifice of safety, convenience or pride. We believe this explains the extraordinary interest in our line, an interest that resulted in the signing of five hundred dealer contracts before we had shown a single, completed automobile and many more since the cars have been seen by the trade and public."

SOMETHING NEW

A machine displayed at the Chicago business show is capable of adding up and down and sideways across twenty columns of figures at the same time.

An electric railway car capable of a speed of 100 miles and hour was exhibited at the recent American Electric Railway Association convention at Alantic City.

An electric hammer for removing dents from automobile fenders and bodies has been placed on the market.

A tool resmbling an elongated brace and bit has been invented to bore holes in the ground for setting out plants without requiring a man to bend his back.

To rest smokers' teeth, an inventor has designed a pipe with a stem shaped to rest against a man's chin.

Groceries are dispensed from coin-in-the-slot compartments in an electrically operated showcase recently introduced.

Electric clocks, designed for use in stores and offices, are made with a panel under the face, back of which a half dozen advertisements may be placed.

A remarkably durable floor covering is now made of leather, cut into squares and laid like tile.

An attachment for motion picture projectors has been developed to clean grease, oil spots and dirt from films as they are being exhibited.

A system of heating boilers has been perfected in which balls of burning powdered coal are balanced on top of vertical jets of compressed air, the ashes falling around them.

Weighing only 11 pounds, a single cylinder motor has been invented in Germany to supply power to ordinary bicycles.

A special machine which can determine the presence of hardening of the arteries when a physician can not determine it by ordinary tests was recently shown.

An instrument has been developed at the University of Iowa to test singers' voices by registering off-key notes.

A Texas inventor claims to have designed an automatic coupler for railroad cars that includes airbrake hose connections with which thirteen hazardous operations are eliminated.

A ratchet attachment that can be used on any screwdriver to increase its leverage has been invented.

New York experimenters have succeeded in transmitting human voices more than half a mile on a beam of light.

Sound can now be recorded on cardboard paper disks through a photographic process by the use of an apparatus known as an "optophone."

Stainless steel covers that can be snapped in place over the wire spokes of automobile wheels have been invented.

The long-sought method of applying designs and colors to mohair in volume production has been discovered.

After more than 50 years of research chemical engineers have produced a green synthetic dye known as duratol green G, of great brilliancy.

An instrument has been perfected to make "still" or slow-motion pictures of machinery moving at high speed.

Food can be cooked on a dining table by placing over it a new cover that contains a heating element.

A giant checker game, its pieces being moved by players with hooked poles, has been developed as a rival to miniature golf.

A new process for making starch from sweet potato culls, of great importance to the agricultural South, has been found by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

A portable gasoline motor driven machine that two men can operate has been perfected in Germany to drive the screws that hold rail plates to railroad ties.

An automatic movie camera that you can carry around in your pocket and weighs only 45 ounces is now on the market.

A locomotive whistle has been invented that concentrates its sound in a beam projected ahead of a train to avoid annoying persons living near railroads.

A dual-control motorcycle has been perfected in Germany for instruction of new riders.

A novel punching bag has been perfected in the form of an inflatable balloon, which may be suspended from any smooth surface by a suction cup.

"So that new girl of yours is lazy?"

"Lazy. Why, the other morning I caught her putting popcorn into the pancakes to make them turn over."—Jester.

A German inventor has made a metal frame which can be operated for hours to restore breathing after drowning.

—This statement with facts: that statistics from the Census Department shows that the average number in an American family is four and one-fifth. We wonder if the one-fifth is father.

Another statement we'll back up is: that if we do the repair work on your car that it won't be done like a schoolboy washes his ears—we'll make a thorough job of it; and when we start on your job we don't waste our time looking for a wrench and then try to find a nut to fit the wrench.

LIKENS PHAR LAP TO BRIG O'DOON

Australasia has long been noted for its racing. Seldom a day passes that there is not some kind of thoroughbred sport at either one of the metropolitan courses or at the "pony tracks." As a background for all this activity great nurseries for turning out the blood horse abound. It was at one of these haras in New Zealand that Phar Lap first saw the light of day.

The breeders "down under" are more under the influence of the English than are Americans. So it is not surprising to find in the blood lines of Phar Lap the three great lines of the Motherland—Ben d'Or, St. Simon and Isonomy. In the United States alhtough of course we have quite a plentitude of these famous strains, it is more likely for us to find Fair Play, Commando and Ben Brush appearing prominently in the pedigrees of stake winners.

As in this country quite a number of little known thoroughbreds and relatives of noted horses find their way from England to Australasia, but now and then the blood becomes potent by a cross with native strains. Night Raid, sire of Phar Lap, did not make much of a record, but, as is sometimes the case, as with the "maiden" Tredennis, a stallion that promises to be only a fair success turns out to be almost a world beater. Night Raid has sent not only Phar Lap but other good ones to Melbourne's Flemington and Sydney's Radwick and other big plants.

Horsemen here have been struck by the symmetry of Phar Lap, and no wonder, as his grand sire Radium and his great grand sire Ben d'Or have always been considered as the grandest specimens of the thoroughbred, as far as conformation is concerned. He has the typical Ben d'Or marks on his chestnut coat and in other ways is said to bear quite a striking resemblance to the English horse. Some of the horsemen at Tanforan, on first glimpsing Phar Lap, remarked:

"Why, he's another Brig o'Doon."

Many fans recall Brig o'Doon as he started several times at Tiajuana, and since he has been retired from racing, has been a stock horse at C. T. Boots' Elmwood Farm. Brig o'Doon is a great great grandson of Ben d'Or, the great grand sire of Phar Lap.

The gelding from New Zealand has the stoutest blood of England in his veins, and also that of Carbine, the "Man o' War" of the Southern Hemisphere. He gets the Carbine blood through Spearmint on the distaff side of Night Raid's pedigree and also through the New Zealand mare Entreaty, which goes back to Carbine through his son Maxim.

He has what the blood line students call five free generations to Carbine and six free generations to Galopin, the sire of St. Simon. Doubling up on those kind of lines has long been fashionable in England and in Phar Lap's native country.

John Brown and other breeders in Australasia have been especially "strong" for the blood of Isonomy and the invading Phar Lap is not lacking in that, either, as Entreatry comes down from the sire of Isinglass through his son Pilgrim's Progress.

It might be said that our own Man o'War, who comes down from West Australia through imported Australian Hastings and Fair Paly, is distantly related to Phar Lap, as Carbine was by Musket and the latter stallion was from a mare by West Australian.

In the days gone by in California, when the late James B. Haggin was operating Rancho del Paso, near Sacramento, "down under" blood was more familiar to race goers than at present. One of the notable importations of Haggin was the bringing here of the Matchem stallion Darebin. How much we owe to Darebin is show eloquently in the unbeaten Whitney filly Top Flight. The champion miss is from Flyatit, a daughter of Peter Pan, and Peter Pan is none other than Commando which was from Darebin's daughter Emma C.

Africander, which similarly to Phar Lap could run "all day," was bred at Rancho del Paso and was a grand son of Derebin through African Queen.

We have called Carbine, which won the Melbourne cup with 145 pounds on his back, the Man o'War of Australia, and perhaps it would not be stretching it much to give the cognomen "Hindoo" of Australia to Phar Lap. As race goers recall, the American Hindoo started thirty-five times, won thirty races and was never outside the money.

A woman dressed entirely in black carried into an orphans' home in Chicago a box filled with gold pieces to the value of $3,500, and then hurried away.

Federal taxes are to be boosted. It is understood that Europe and the Farm Board are running short of funds.

Japan says she is doing in Manchuria only what we did in Nicaragua. Mr. Stimson will have to think up an answer for that.

Pillows containing radio telephones have been invented to be used in hospitals to enable patients to listen to broadcasts without disturbing other persons.

VETERANS IN CONGRESS

War veterans in the Seventy-second Congress number 116, of which 16 are in the Senate and 100 in the House. These served in either the Spanish-American or World war, or both. No veteran of the Civil war survives in the national legislature, Senator Warren being the last Union soldier and Congressman Steadman being the last Confederate to serve in that body.

Of the veterans in the present Congress, twenty-six served in the Spanish-American war, and nine of these served in the World war also. Ninety members served only in the World war.

Those who served in both wars are Senators Brookhart of Iowa, Howell of Nebraska, and Connally of Texas; Representatives Thurston of Iowa, Woodruff of Michigan, Culkin of New York, Martin of Oregon, Coyle of Pennsylvania, and Delegate Houston of Hawaii.

New York has ten veterans in its delegation, Pennsylvania nine, Ohio and Illinois six each. Other states have fewer numbers, while Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, New Hampshire, North Dakota and Utah have no veteran representation at present.

It is probable that an increasing number of former soldiers will be elected to Congress in the coming year, as a record of war service is generally a valuable asset to a candidate for office.

THE TIPPING CUSTOM

While many attempts have been made to eradicate it, even by the passage of laws, the tipping habit persists, through lack of courage on the part of the public to resist it. Originally, no doubt, the custom of giving tips to servants was inspired by kindly motives, but it has grown to be a nuisance—simply a species of petty graft. Many employers of low class help pay miserably small wages, with the knowledge that tips from customers will supply the deficiency. Employees accept the small wages, or often no wages, with the same understanding. Consequently the public pays in the aggregate vast sums for which no service is rendered.

The effect of the tipping custom is wholly bad, because those who accept the gratuities must lose somewhat in self-respect, while those who pay them do so simply because it is expected and they do not wish to appear stingy. One restaurant recently displayed a sign which read: "We pay our waiters living wages and do not permit them to accept tips." That sign inevitably caused patrons to hold a higher opinion of the proprietor and his waiters.

NO FREE SERVICE

There is a growing belief on the part of business men that many concerns are carrying the idea of so-called free service too far. The fact is that no such thing as free service exists. All service which costs money to perform must be paid for by someone.

Take such a simple example as that of free delivery of merchandise sold, and it may readily be seen that the maintenance of delivery trucks or messengers adds to the merchant's expense of doing business. He must pass this expense on to his customers in the form of an increased price for his goods.

While this is fair and proper in principle, the injustice lies in that the customer who does not demand delivery must usually pay as much as the customer who does. If no one required delivery the price might be correspondingly reduced. That this is true is illustrated by the "cash and carry" stores and in a modified degree by the cafeteria system.

The same principle applies to all business which supplies "free" facilities or service to customers. In the long run someone has to pay, although it is not always the customer who receives the benefit of the extra service.

POLICE BALL IS EXPECTED TO BE OUTSTANDING EVENT

No previous ball in the history of the San Francisco police department will compare with the one to be held on Saturday night, February 13, at the Civic Auditorium, according to the announcement of Captain John J. Casey, general chairman of the ball. Karl Eber, noted impressario of entertainment, who put on the pageant of last year's ball, is again in charge and promises to outdoo his notable achievement of 1931. There will be a cast of five hundred in the pageant this year, a chorus of forty voices, and a Virginia reel by thirty couple dressed in Colonial costume. Evelyn Cavagnaro, late of the Ziegfeld Follies, Jean Kelly, talented daughter of a San Francisco police officer, and other famous stars will shine at the ball. Maurice Chevalier, George O'Brien and John Barrymore have accepted bids to be present. Governor Rolph and Mayor Rossi will be in the lead in the grand march.

"If you miss the policemen's ball this year you will miss a treat," adds Captain Casey.

PRECEDING EVENTS

Joe Barry, country youth in New York, ekes out a living as caretaker in a poor rooming house and accordion player in Louie Bertolini's restaurant. Lured by the open country, he spends a night in the fields, neglecting his duties. Next day Bertolini discharges him. A frequent visitor to Bertolini's offers him $10,000 to impersonate a "bootlegger" in trouble. It means a penitentiary sentence for Joe, and he hesitates. The man, "Martin," gives him $1,000 "on account." Next day Joe deposits $800 in country banks, giving his name as Joseph Bradley. A circus attracts him. Outside a tent he sees an accordion and is tempted to play it. A girl Sue Dayton, niece of the owner, who admires the music, urges him to take a position with the circus. Joe says he must first return to New York "on business." He has decided to refuse "Martin's" offer. In his room four men accost him. Bewildered, Joe sees the men, who are detectives, find large amounts of money, a machine gun, and two revolvers.

Joe remembered little but the crowding and clattering noise as they went down the stairs. Once on the sidewalk, he looked for a patrol wagon. There was none; only a sleek-appearing car, with drawn side curtains and a glow from crimson headlights. A jangling bell began to sound after the machine had started, drowning out other noises. Soon the machine stopped, and he was led inside a building, to a desk where a white-haired, disinterested man in shirtsleeves asked him questions and wrote the answers down in a book. Then the locks of the handcuffs clicked raspingly, as a barred door closed behind him, and another man in shirtsleeves, fat, disinterested, impersonal, took him by the arm. Joe saw rows and rows of barred places to his right and faces peering out at him. The turnkey swung back a door and gave Joe Barry a gentle push. The prisoner's muscles galvanized.

"You're not going to put me in there!" he begged. "I didn't do anything, I swear I didn't do anything!"

"I'm just the turnkey; I don't even know what you're in for."

"But, please, can't I talk to somebody? You could do that for me."

"Park yourself on that bunk in there," answered the turnkey. "You'll get a chance to do all the talking you want in a little while."

Then his big key turned the lock and he was gone. Somehow, like blurred clouds before the dawn, the minutes dragged by. Then the turnkey came, as disinterestedly as before, and unlocked the cell.

"Captain wants to see you."

This time, it was into a room that they took him, where a big man with much gold on his uniform, rolled in a loose-pivoted chair. Pete Maxwell was there, too, and Ed and Jerry and Jake. Three packages, wrapped in brown paper, were on the table, and an envelope from which currency protruded. The captain brushed that aside, and with thick fingers broke the strings of the larger packages. From behind Joe Barry's eyes, a sudden pressure began to make itself felt, as if thumbs were pushing them outward. The rattling paper had revealed two heaters or automatic pistols and the ugly outlines of a Tommy or Thompson machine gun.

"Well, sport," said the captain monotonously, "what about this hardware?"

"I don't know anything about it. I never saw the stuff before. It was put in my room today while I was away."

"So?" the captain looked up. "Away where?"

Joe Barry's lower jaw shot open, and hung there. If he told that, he also must tell whom he saw and where he went. Involuntarily he winced, as Sue Dayton might wince if she knew that the young fellow whom she had wanted for her ring mate was tainted by accusations.

"I just went out of town for a day."

"It's a big country. Where?"

Joe Barry's eyes took on a desperate fire.

"I won't tell you!"

The captain looked at him blandly.

"Oh, all right," he said, "sit down."

They moved a chair to the end of the table; Ed and Jerry sat down, too, then Jake. The captain picked up the evil-looking machine gun and eyed it carefully.

"So somebody sneaked this into your room. Who, for instance?"

Barry straightened with hope.

"His name is Martin. He's a lawyer. I got fired last night down at Louie Bertolini's place and this lawyer said he had a job for me. He gave me some money and told me to go out into the country and take a day off. Then I could come back tonight and tell him whether I wanted to go through with this deal or not. He said he had a friend who'd gotten into some trouble over some liquor and he wanted me to take his place. So I—"

"Don't make a speech about it," said the captain quietly. "We'll get at things one at a time. Martin, you said the name was?"

"Yes, sir."

"The town's full of Martins. Which one?"

"His name is John B. Martin," came tonelessly. "He's an attorney and his offices are down at 60 Wall street."

"Sure of that, are you?" The name evidently had made no impression upon the captain. He raised his eyes and gave a slight jerk of his head. "Take him back," he commanded. Barry clung to the table.

"But there's a lot more to tell!" he begged. "I haven't got anything to hide. I want to tell you just how I happened to get into this mess."

"Don't tear your shirt," admonished the captain quietly. Then to Pete: "Take him back."

Again the metallic clatter of his heels; again the faces and bars, and the sight of a frowsy woman peering out from under her hair. Then he was alone, sitting on his slatted iron cot, hands sweating one moment between his knees, the next instant rubbing at his hot cheeks or across his burning eyes. He rose and paced, three steps one way, three steps back, bumping against the steel plates at one end, the rough bars at the other. Suddenly he settled, with fearful determination.

They hadn't believed him when he told about Mr. Martin. Maybe they'd question him again. That's it, they'd bring him out and question him for a while, then send him back to forget what he'd said. But he must not forget one thing; they could burn him in oil if they wanted to, but he mustn't forget one thing. He'd make up a story about where he'd been today, and he'd stick to it. Other things faded—just that a girl should not know; this seemed to be all that counted now. Minutes dragged by. He mustn't forget to keep quiet about where he'd been today. An hour passed. The turnkey came and unlocked his cell. They went back to the captain's office.

"Sit down," said the captain. Then everybody seemed to forget him, except a fifth person who was now in the room, a tall, gray-haired man with some distinguishing characteristics, who came to the other end of the table and looked intently at him.

"No," he said after a long time.

"Sure?" asked the captain.

"Absolutely."

Pete Maxwell lit a cigarette. Ed slumped in his chair and began the reading of an early edition newspaper. Jake and Jerry just sat. The captain looked over some papers from his desk. From the other end of the table, the gray-haired man stared at Joe—and Joe returned the look.

"Absolutely," said the gray-haired man for a second time. The captain seemingly ignored the remark.

"Sport," he began, leaning toward Joe Barry, "Forgot to ask you before. Suppose you give me an accurate description of this John B. Martin?"

Joe Barry licked his lips.

"Well, I don't know how accurate I can be. I didn't pay much attention, except that he was about medium height, and had dark hair and eyes."

"Weight?"

"He wasn't very heavy."

"And just medium height?"

"Yes, sir."

"Not tall, like Detective Maxwell there, or this gentleman?"

"No, sir."

The captain leaned back in his chair.

"Sport," he said, "suppose you cut the comedy and save us a lot of trouble. This gentleman here, whom we had to disturb out of a night's sleep, happens to have his offices at 60 Wall street. And he's the only John B. Martin in that building."

Joe Barry's lips quivered; he was reaching the point where a nerve-burned body refused to give more emphatic signals of his distress.

"Well," came tonelessly, "I don't know what we can do about it."

The captain seemed to disregard that, too.

Has Scientists Puzzled

So far as man's memory extends, Ireland has been without snakes. Whether or not St. Patrick is the reason for the Emerald isle's immunity, England, Scotland and Wales, but a few miles across the water, have always had at least a fair sized population of these reptiles. The nearest approach to a snake in Ireland is a legless lizard called the lag worm, which isn't formidable even in appearance. During recent years there have been many attempts to introduce harmless snakes as an aid to farmers, but the introductions have not been successful. Zoologists are unable to account for the phenomenon.

King James' Bible

The authorized version of the Bible is the same as the King James version because the revision was made by some of the greatest scholars of the country and of the world, under the authorization of King James I of England, who was also King James VI of Scotland, and in whose reign England and Scotland were united. James was the son of Mary queen of Scots; the grandson of Henry VIII and the nephew of Queen Elizabeth. He was, under English law, a Protestant, but had extreme leanings toward the Roman Catholic faith.—Washington Star.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

You are riding in your automobile on a paved road from Peoria to Springfield, Ill. Off to the west runs a branch road, also a modern highway. If you follow it, in a little while you come to the town of Petersburg—just another little Middle Western city. But keep on going south. Now you are following a winding road which leads up on the bluffs overlooking the Sangamon river. Suddenly you forget that you are riding in an automobile and that you have been speeding over a modern concrete road. You forget that this is 1932. For a hundred years roll back and it is the year 1832. The magic which has brought about this transformation is the sight of a little cluster of log cabins scattered over a grassy tract of some 60 acres which unfolds before you.

The cabins are empty, it is true, but if you have any imagination at all, it's easy enough to people them. Come over here to this cabin. The sign in front of it says that it is the Offut store. Walk inside. There behind the rough plank counter a tall, gangling, awkward-looking young man is unrolling a bolt of calico and holding it out to the appraising fingers of a woman in a homespun dress. Do you recognize him? No?

Well, then, come over here to this big double log cabin. The sign on the front says it is the Rutledge tavern. It is evening and in front of the fire which blazes in the big fireplace at one end of the room is a group of men. It's pretty likely they'll be listening to a story which this same tall, gangling, awkward-looking young man is telling. Back in the shadows you may be able to see the form of a young girl—an unusually attractive girl even though she is dressed in calico. She is the daughter of the tavern-keeper and her name is Ann. But if by chance the tall man isn't in the Rutledge tavern let's take a look in another cabin nearby. It's the cooper shop of a certain Henry Onstott. There's a fireplace here, too, and stretched out on the floor in front of it is this young man we've been seeking. Of course, you've guessed who it is by now. But just in case you haven't, ask him to let you take his book for a moment. Look on the flyleaf in front and there you'll see the name "A. Lincoln."

Of all the memorials that have been erected to the memory of Abraham Lincoln this one on the banks of the Sangamon river in Menard county, Illinois, is unique. It is no imposing edifice of marble or granite. It contains no work from the chisel and mallet of a great sculptor, portraying once more the familiar face and form of the Great Emancipator. But when the projected reconstruction work is completed, the village of New Salem, where Lincoln "passed from raw untutored youth to strong intellectual manhood," will be a place where his fellow-Americans can go and in the atmosphere of that place they can more nearly feel a spiritual kinship to him than in any other place dedicated to his memory.

Of Old Salem park, the state park which has been established there, a recent bulletin of the Illinois department of public works and buildings says:

"It was a small town but it gave birth to a Great Soul. When Lincoln at the age of twenty-two, drifted down the river in 1831 and stranded his boat upon the famous mill dam at Old Salem, the town was only two years old, but in those two years it had gained a population of one hundred inhabitants and scattered along its one long street on either side there were in the neighborhood of 25 cabins of varying size including the large, two-story double room tavern.

"Here he came a friendless, overgrown boy, uncouth, uneducated, with a knowledge of only the barest rudiments of reading, writing and arithmetic. Here he chopped wood, tended store, became a merchant for himself, narrowly avoiding bankruptcy and utterly failed in commercial lines. He was appointed postmaster, using his hat for his office. He acted as surveyor and his monuments are yet taken as authority. . . . Here he studied grammar, philosophy and law and learned to debate against men of learning.

"During his residence here his character was formed; his education was completed, his name of 'Honest Abe' acquired; he caught the urge to serve humanity in a big broad, unselfish way. Here sweet chapters were written into his great life which grip the hearts of men throughout the world. . . .

"With Lincoln's departure in 1837 for wider fields, Old Salem having served its purpose, went into a decline and became a deserted village. Its cabins were removed to Petersburg where fortunately one was preserved. This was the Onstott Cooper shop where by the light of the cooper's shingles, Lincoln studied Shakespeare, Burns and Blackstone. It has been returned to its original foundation at Old Salem.

"Salem is the old Biblical word meaning 'peace' and here if you have any sentiment coursing in your blood, you will find peace. Perfect peace hovers over this serene, stately eminence of green jutting out into the quiet sea of prairie and woodland. Old Salem never ceased to mean much to Lincoln. He expected to make it his rural home after his second Presidency.

" . . . Research work has brought to view the original foundations of every log cabin along these forgotten streets, the almost obliterated road leading out of the village to Springfield and the path from Offut's store where Lincoln clerked, down to the grist mill where he was wont to officiate. Soon all log cabins will be restored on their original foundations and all cabins, shops and mill will be furnished as they were in 1831.

"When this work is tactfully done, the semblance of a vanished era will be perfect. The associations, the taverns, the homes, the old well which is now in use, the paths of a great life will be eloquently imparted to us. The six happiest and most fruitful years Abraham Lincoln had spent up to this time in his life will lie before us more vividly than tongue or pen could describe them."

So far the buildings which have been restored are the Rutledge tavern, the Offut store, near which took place the famous Armstrong-Lincoln wrestling match; the store where Lincoln and William Berry were business partners; the Henry Onstott cooper shop and the Hill and McNamar store. There is also a handsome stone structure which is used as a Lincoln museum, containing many interesting Lincoln relics. Although the original town was named New Salem, the state park and the restored village is called Old Salem. This was necessary because there is a New Salem in Pike county, Illinois, and a town of Salem in Marion county. So to prevent confusion, it was thought best to call the ressurrected town Old Salem.

It was during Lincoln's life in New Salem that there became associated with his name some of the innumerable stories so familiar to all of us. Some of them are sufficiently authenticated to be accepted as fact but others are pure legend. Not the least of the services of the late Senator Albert J. Beveridge in his monumental biography of Lincoln, published by the Houghton Mifflin company some four years ago, was the confirming of some of these legends and the dispelling of others so that an authentic portrait of Lincoln emerged from the great mass of evidence of which he examined.

The high spot in Lincoln's career at New Salem in the mind of most people, no doubt, was his romance with Ann Rutledge, daughter of the tavernkeeper, over which so many writers have rhapsodized, albeit usually inaccurately. There was a very substantial basis of fact for the legend which has sprung up about this love affair, but it was not the "grand passion" which has been so often depicted. Of her Beveridge says:

"Ann appears to have been the most attractive girl in New Salem and was courted by the two most prominent and prosperous young men of the village, Samuel Hill and John McNamar. McNamar was her favorite and she became engaged to the thrifty young financier with whom, it would appear, she was very much in love. Lincoln, too, 'had great partialities' for her, but McNamar stood in his way. . . . McNamar and Lincoln were friends and the young merchant did not know that Lincoln was 'paying any particular attention to any of the Young Ladies of my acquaintance' as, indeed, he was not at that time. On her part, Ann was not then 'favorably impressed' with Lincoln, who was 'young, poor and awkward' and without prospects, while both Hill and McNamar were 'up in the world'."

McNamar went by the name of McNiel in New Salem, a name which he had assumed when he left his home in New York to seek his fortune in the West and pay off the debts which his father had accumulated. His only reason for the change of name was in order "to avoid pursuit by his parents" and there was no disgrace attached to that change. But it led to tragedy just the same. For McNamar went back East, fell ill and with other troubles piling up on him, his letters to Ann, to whom he had confessed his real name, became infrequent and finally ceased coming to New Salem.

"Troubled that letters from her betrothed no longer came, Ann told her parents of McNamar's change of name. Suspicion instantly sprang up and possessed the Rutledge family. Rumor of the circumstances soon ran from cabin to cabin in the little hamlet; gossip made the worst of the situation. . . . Ann had been abandoned.

"So stood matters when Lincoln, through whose hands (as postmaster at the time) her correspondence with McNamar had passed, began his courtship, the nature and course of which are misty. No positive engagement resulted, although it seems that there was a tentative agreement to marry, 'conditional,' however, asserts Ann's brother, 'to an honorable release from the contract with McNamar.' Indeed, when urged by her younger brother, David, to marry Lincoln, Ann refused until she could see McNamar again and 'inform him of the change.'"

But she was destined never to see him again for she died on August 25, 1835. "When Lincoln came from the bedside of the dying girl, observers noted that he was despondent and, when she died, he appeared gloomy and dejected. Again, in the village, 'old people' wagged their heads and said that he was mentally unbalanced, this time because of sorrow. 'But various opinions obtained as to the cause of his change, some thought it was an increased application to his law studies, others that it was deep anguish of Soul (as he was all soul) over the Loss of Miss R'.

Beveridge then quotes another biographer of Lincoln as saying "Gossip and imagination have represented this early romance as casting a shadow over his whole after life, and as having produced something bordering upon insanity. The picture has been somewhat too highly colored and the story made rather too tragic." It was sufficiently tragic for the first love of Ann Rutledge for some three months later McNamar came back to New Salem to find his betrothed dead.

ROAD WORK NEVER DONE

Road construction and road work are never done.

We have built thousands of miles of fine highways. But the inexorable march of progress makes more and still more roads necessary. The increased mechanization of agriculture has made it vital that the millions of farmers now living on unimproved roads be given means for fast, efficient and economical transport.

It might be said that a road dollar has never been entirely wasted. There have been "political" roads and there has been uselessly expensive construction in areas where there was no need for it. These things must be discouraged. But every time we build a road we are adding another stone to the structure of civilization. We are making possible a higher economic and social development for our people.

Modern engineering practice and materials have made it possible to build weatherproof, surfaced, secondary roads for a fraction of the cost of high-type main highways. Their construction is the solution of the pressing problem.

Most Americans believe they would know George Washington's picture when they saw it, but a good many would fail to recognize the Father of His Country as he appears on several of the new bicentennial postage stamps, placed on sale this month. The new stamps are eleven in number, ranging from one-half to ten cents. Some of them portray Washington as a young man, and show little resemblance to the familiar likeness of Stuart's portrait and Houdon's bust.

Hazardous occupations are hazardous only to the unlucky, it seems. Many persons flirt with death all their lives only to to die of old age. So it was with Frank S. Lahm, famous balloonist, who died in Paris a few days ago at the age of 85. He was the first winner of the James Gordon Bennett trophy.

SAN FRANCISCO MAINTAINS CUSTOMS COLLECTIONS LEAD

San Francisco maintained its dominant lead in customs collections on the Pacific coast during the past fiscal year, according to the January issue of the Business Review, compiled by the Bank of America N. T. & S. A.

"The total of $9,549,407 collected in San Francisco virtually equaled the total of $9,812,336 collected by Los Angeles, San Diego, Washington and Oregon districts combined," the bank comments.

"San Francisco is second only to New York in the total number of entries of all kinds," the bank continues.

Considering the international situation the tonnage report of San Francisco harbor held up remarkably well during 1931 with the decrease of both departing and incoming vessels' cargoes being very small.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1932 NUMBER 27

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Dingus: "How does it happen that there are such a lot of jokes on the Scotch?"

Goofus: "I know the secret. The Scotch get them up themselves and sell them."

Judge: "Where did the automobile hit you?"

Rastus: "Well, suh, if I'd been carrying a license number it would have been busted into a thousand pieces."

Keep your pride in your home. Repair and improve and you will find every cent put into it is money well invested.

"The plot thickens," said the old man as he sowed more grass seed.

Mrs. Newlywed: "I am disappointed with my baking, dear. This is meant for a cottage pudding, but it wouldn't rise."

Sympathetic Hubby: "Never mind, darling. We'll just call it a flat pudding."

"What's the score, boy?"

"Fotty-two to nuthin'."

"Is your side losing?"

"Losin' — law-zee. Why, man alive, we all ain't bin to bat yit."

We sell good Paint and are always prepared to advise as to the kind that is best adapted to your needs.

No, it never can be done. If we all were to love our neighbors as we love ourselves, the flattery would be sickening and there'd be nobody to blame anything on.

He may not have a little fairy in his home, but he has a little miss in his engine, and he also has a little made in his cellar.

Sometimes the bulls are on top and sometimes the bears, but there is never any question as to who is in the middle.

Sitting down at the restaurant, Joe prepared to speak—"Ahem." Mike, who had come in with him, rejoined, "Make mine a cheese."

"STERLING," the Wallboard of satisfaction.
